Have you noticed a drop in revenues over the past few years?

Have you ever considered filing a BP claim?

Did you know that you do not have to prove causation?

If you can show a drop in revenues followed by an increase (or if you went out of business) anytime from 2007 to 2011, you can receive an awarded amount from BP.

For example, an accounting firm in New Orleans received $350,000. An attorney received $1.3M. A manufacturer of laundry equipment also received over $1M.

There are no requirements of location or association with any particular industry.

What is needed?

All that is required is to show the drop in revenues, and the only thing we need from you are monthly financial statements.

If you don't have those, that's fine. We can create the monthly statements from what records you do have.

“How much is this going to cost ME?”

Right now, nothing. And we only collect if you receive an award. In that case, we collect a fee of 25% in accordance with the terms of the settlement.

“So, what do I have to do?”

Just provide us with the information.

We will do all the work, run the numbers and determine whether you qualify. If you do, then we will calculate your loss and anticipated award and prepare all the documents. All you will have to do is come in to sign.

If you do not qualify, then we will let you know. That's it. You do not owe anything.

“So, what's the catch?”

Really, there isn't one. This is just the way the attorneys for the plaintiffs in the BP case set up the settlement. It was done so this is a win-win situation.

There is nothing to lose here.
